Praise for Coffee with Jesus

“Christianity Today, the magazine I edited for twenty-eight years, was not known for its keen sense of humor. That’s why Coffee with Jesus is one of my guilty pleasures. I read its sassy Jesus as a refuge from sober Christians and to make up for the smart-aleck gene missing from my DNA.”

—DAVID NEFF, former editor in chief, Christianity Today

Knock Knock

Knock, knock.

The door is open, Kevin.
Please come in.

No, you're supposed to say, "Who's there?" Jesus.

Yeah, that kinda goes against my nature. I've never been any good at this game.

Where's the Love?

Christians aren't perfect,
just forgiven.

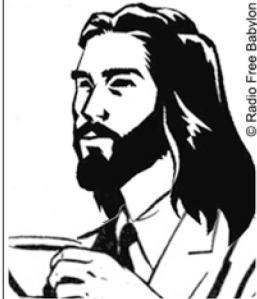

Right, J-Man?

Right again, Carl. And let me guess; God is your co-pilot?
And your boss is a Jewish carpenter?

Man, whenever I try to share something with you,
why you always gotta be
so sarcastic and mocking?
Where's the love, Jesus?

Still love you, Carl. But if your grown son was talking like a two-year-old well into his 40s, don't you think you'd want to smack him around just a little?

Without A Vison Part Two

I confess, Jesus, the cool church down the road has gotten under my skin. My people are lured by their programs and nice buildings.

And their stylish pastor with his dynamic delivery, their talented band, their digital marquee, their coffee shop.

Sure, all that stuff.

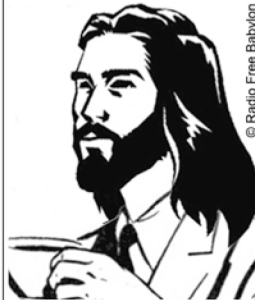

Stuff, Joe.

Be Still

Wow.

Told you.

Pedaling Uphill

I feel like I'm pedaling uphill, Jesus, against the wind.

And the uphill, Ann, makes the downhill that much more worthwhile.

So life is basically a 50/50 game, half of it easy and half of it hard?

No, Ann.
Life is pedaling.
