

“Drawing on the wisdom of Aristotle, Wilberforce, Lincoln, and other theorists and practitioners of political prudence, Forsythe has written a book that will both instruct and inspire all who work to protect the weak and vulnerable and to advance the cause of justice.”

—Robert George, McCormick Professor of Jurisprudence, and director of the James Madison Program in American Ideals and Institutions, Princeton University

Clarke D. Forsythe is a leading policy strategist in bioethical issues and senior counsel for Americans United for Life, a national pro-life public policy organization (aul.org).

During his twenty-two years with Americans United for Life, Forsythe has served in a number of positions. From 2003-2006 he directed AUL’s Project in Law & Bioethics, and he served as vice president and general counsel for six years, overseeing AUL’s nationwide litigation and legislation strategy.

Forsythe has argued cases before federal and state courts and has testified before Congress and state legislatures.

He has published more than fifteen law review articles and book chapters and has been published in First Things and National Review Online. He has also been published or quoted nationally in leading newspapers, including the New York Times, USA Today, the Washington Times, the Washington Post, Chicago Tribune and the Wall Street Journal. Forsythe’s recent articles include “A Lack of Prudence,” published in the Human Life Review; “Protecting Unconscious, Medically-Dependent Persons after Wendland & Schiavo,” published in Constitutional Commentary; and “The Tragic Failure of Roe v. Wade: Why Abortion Should Be Returned to the States,” published in Texas Review of Law & Politics.

Forsythe has a law degree from Valparaiso University School of Law, a B.A. in political science from Allegheny College and an M.A. in bioethics (magna cum laude) from Trinity International University. He has taught classes at Wheaton College, Trinity International University, and other colleges and universities, as well as spoken to audiences at Marquette University, Notre Dame Law School, Valparaiso University School of Law and Ave Maria School of Law.

Clarke lives in the Chicago area with his wife and five daughters.