Rediscovering the prophets through the eyes of the Reformers

In Ezekiel, Daniel, the latest volume in the Reformation Commentary on Scripture series, the startling and intense imagery, visions and oracles of the Old Testament Hebrew prophets are explored through the eyes of the church Reformers. These unnerving stories and apocalyptic pronouncements were especially captivating to the Reformers as they strove to view their circumstances through the lens of the Bible.

Volume editor Carl L. Beckwith brings together for the first time the voices of Luther, Calvin and Melancthon, as well as many lesser-known thinkers, to allow us to understand why the books of Ezekiel and Daniel were so crucial in the Reformation-era revolution in preaching and interpreting the Bible. This volume creates a window into the biblical, theological and pastoral minds of the Reformers as they engage the texts, providing new, deeper insights into these important and familiar passages.

About the Reformation Commentary on Scripture

Following IVP Academic's critical success with the Ancient Christian Commentary on Scripture, this project is an important step in a churchwide effort of retrieval. "The Reformers saw themselves as standing in fundamental continuity with the early church fathers," says Timothy George, series editor. "The RCS seeks to present the Reformers and their engagement with the Bible in the context of the ongoing history of the people of God."

The project brings together a team of world-class Reformation scholars under the leadership of general editor Timothy George and associate general editor Scott M. Manetsch. Each volume features a mix of major and minor voices from the era, with many texts appearing for the first time in English.

Projected to be a twenty-eight-volume biblical commentary, the series puts the words of the Reformers directly into the hands of the contemporary church.

BOOK DETAILS

Timothy George (Th.D., Harvard University), series editor for the Reformation Commentary on Scripture, is a renowned Reformation historian and author of Theology of the Reformers, as well as many other theological and historical works. He is the founding dean of Beeson Divinity School, Samford University, in Birmingham, Alabama, and a member of the advisory council for First Things.

Praise for the Reformation Commentary on Scripture

“The Reformation Commentary on Scripture is a major publishing event—for those with historical interest in the founding convictions of Protestantism, but even more for those who care about understanding the Bible. . . . [T]his effort brings flesh and blood to ‘the communion of saints’ by letting believers of our day look over the shoulders of giants from the past. By connecting the past with the present, and by doing so with the Bible at the center, the editors of this series perform a great service for the church. The series deserves the widest possible support.”

Mark A. Noll, Francis A. McAnaney Professor of History, University of Notre Dame

“Discerning the true significance of movements in theology requires acquaintance with their biblical exegesis. This is supremely so with the Reformation, which was essentially a biblical revival. The Reformation Commentary on Scripture will fill a yawning gap, just as the Ancient Christian Commentary did before it, and the first volume gets the series off to a fine start, whetting the appetite for more. Most heartily do I welcome and commend this long overdue project.”

J. I. Packer, Board of Governors Professor of Theology, Regent College

“This commentary series is a godsend!”

Richard J. Mouw, president, Fuller Theological Seminary

“Why was this not done before? . . . This commentary series brings the very best of the Reformation heritage to the task of exegesis and exposition, and each volume in this series represents a veritable feast that takes us back to the sixteenth century to enrich the preaching and teaching of God’s Word in our own time.”

R. Albert Mohler Jr., president, The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary

“I heartily recommend this series as a tremendous resource not only for ministry but for personal edification.”

Michael S. Horton, J. G. Machen Professor of Systematic Theology and Apologetics, Westminster Seminary, California
