“mobilizing the church toward a God-centered response to the environmental crisis”

Care of Creation was founded in 2005 as an evangelical environmental mission agency – one of the first organizations to seek to integrate a response to the global environmental crisis with the evangelical church's traditional commitment to outreach and missions. At Care of Creation we believe that loving God & loving God's people necessarily implies loving and caring for God's creation.

Environmental disaster is threatening countries around the world, and putting at risk not only huge numbers of God's creatures, but also his people. Deforestation, population pressures, drought and flood, toxic pollution in air and water – all mean increased poverty and disease, declining welfare and economic prosperity and serious political unrest. We know from Care of Creation's own recent research that many African leaders now consider the environmental crisis to be of greater threat to their people than even the HIV-Aids epidemic.

Care of Creation is committed to a ministry through and for local churches around the world that encourages a theologically and scientifically sound response to the environmental crisis that

- Brings glory to the Creator
- Advances the cause of Christ
- And transforms the people and the land that sustains them.

We do this...

In Kenya through an innovative and integrated four-pronged project approach: Proclaiming God's vision; planting God's trees; harvesting God's water; and farming God's way. Our local subsidiary organization, Care of Creation-Kenya, is staffed by two staff members from Care of Creation Inc and 12 local employees.

In the United States through presentation of the Our Father's World Seminars by Rev. Edward Brown, author of the book, Our Father's World, and Director of Care of Creation, and through support of churches and individuals wanting to mobilize their own churches to respond to the environmental crisis.

Planting God's trees is a key component of the Care of Creation strategy in Kenya.
